Hi Santo,

Thank you for your thoughtful submission and for the care and passion you poured into your seed funding application. Members of the review team from the National Geographic Society and The Nature Conservancy truly enjoyed reading your proposal and seeing how you plan to build on the work you began during your externship.

I'm excited to share that you've been selected to receive $2,000 USD in seed funding from NGS+TNC! 🎉

Next Steps:

We'll be hosting a kickoff session in November to go over fund disbursement, check-in calls, and general guidance—so please hold off on launching your project or spending any funds until then. You'll receive a calendar invite in the coming days. Our goal is to disburse the funding by the end of October.

In the meantime, please log in to the Extern portal and confirm or update your bank account information—the same place where you entered in information to receive your externship stipend. This will ensure we can process your payment without delays.

Reviewer Feedback:

Here's a quick summary of the feedback from your reviewers—no need to resubmit anything, just sharing this to support you as you move forward:

- I loved the Storymap! It was the first one that truly used maps to engage the audience in an entire story. The solution was well organized and way more detailed than the other Storymaps I read. Santo has an in-depth proposal with some really good ideas.
- This is one of the most engaging Storymaps I have seen. It was very well thought through and helped me really visualise and understand the issues and people impacted. Recognition of what is achievable in the time period, with details of longer term plans was also helpful in understanding the potential impact of this project.
- Suggest seeing this money spent on surveying the community to understand the root causes of the waste management problem. Will also need to think about where & how this project will be documented, i.e. how this knowledge will be shared with other provinces for them to replicate the work.

This feedback is just for your consideration—no need to formally respond or revise anything. We're really excited to support your work and can't wait to see how it all comes together!

Best,
Monika + the Extern team
